He seems to think that, if he were given a free hand, he would be able to guarantee the politeness, the honesty, and the efficiency of all the servants in the colony. That is a thing that no Government in the world has vet attempted, much less accomplished, and if Mr. May attempts it he will find that, while he may be held as a heaven sent deliverer as long as expectation lasts, as soon as the nonfulfilment of the expectation becomes apparent and every master or mistress who bas any trouble with a servant will put it all down the Secretary of State. An employer who diamisses him, as he has a right do, but if the case does not go beyond suspicion his power stops there. It was beld by the late Sir John Smale, Chief in force, that to write on a servant's registration ticket that he had been dismissed on suspicion of dishonesty was libellous. The solf and satisfaction to the public and the bar. same rule would hold good under any new system of registration, so that in the absence of proof of crime a servant would have just the same chance of obtaining employment, neither more nor less, that he has now. Reference has been made to the licensing of public chair and jinricksha coolies and to the improvement which it is claimed has been effected in that class by the system. far as the argument from analogy goes we should say the reference to public chair and of to-day and to-morrow respectively. [20] jinricksha coolies tells rather against than for a system of registration as applied to domestic servants. If the police have achieved such a relatively small measure of success in exercising control over the chair and jinricksha coolies what measure of success could they hope to achieve in respect of house coolies, boys, cooks, and amake? The number of licences issued for the drawers or bearers of public vehicles is limited, and as the number of applicants is greater than the number of licences to he issued, it is possible to make a selection and in that way something may be done towards getting the best men offering. But we suppose no one would propose that the number of domestic servants should be limited, or that employers should be restricted in their choice to cartain then and women selected by the police. anything of that kind were attempted employers would have a very bad time of it and would soon begin to sigh for the greater liberty they at present enjoy. As to registration pure and simple, however, there is this to be said, that if it does no good in can do no harm, except that it will involve some little trouble, and if Mr. MAY is auxious to put his views to the test of experiment and the public are willing to give his system a trial we see no very great reason why it should not be done. Those who believe that registration will transform the character of their servants will, however, be yery much disappointed with the result and

The medical officer of the Rattler (Surgeon Lawrence Bidgell) remarks with reference to the mode of origin of some cases of enterio fever These cases are probably to be attributed to the consumption by the men of adulterated beer and mineral waters sold by the Chinese on shore, or to the use of paddy lice. This is the only kind of joe obtainable at Hankow: it is gathered in winter from the abeliaw stagnant ponds and flooded 'paidy' fields ontside the settlement, and is stored underground for use in summer. It is of course, derived from extremely impure water. The resident Europeans only utilise it for placing in ice chests outside the bottles; but I have Chinese chops, and put it in their drinks.
